“Gregory Robert Lewis, Gregg, G Rex Eyes, I remember the first day I saw you. You walked off the bus. You had your blue Adidas hat, your big jnco jeans, and your blazing blue eyes. You came off of my friend's bus so I automatically approached her with a "who is that"? That was the beginning of it all. I then came to find out the person you were. We had so many things in common that just made it easy for us. It was the first time in my life I found someone who understood me. There was no judgment. There was nothing but comfort, compassion, and connection. I knew I found a best friend, a soulmate, a partner, my everything. We found out we would be parents. When you knew we would have a son, you were so excited. You were so proud. You knew right away that Dean Robert would be his name. You wanted to honor 2 special people in your life. Dean Soltz was a teacher you admired. Robert, of course, was your father's name. I remember every single thing. I remember you always taking care of me. You always put me first. You were my protector. You loved our son the way you always said you would. I swear every single conversation we ever had is replaying in my head. I am reliving every memory. I will hold each one close to my heart. We were eachother's very first loves. I know we both held onto that love. We had the type of special relationship where it didn't matter where we were in life. We could pick up the phone and just pick up where we left off. It didn't matter that "we" didn't work out. All that mattered were we were two peas in a pod. Don't think for one second that I won't be talking to you every single day. I told Dean to do the same. I will look for you in the beauty of nature. I will hear you in the music I listen to. I will hold you close to my heart. I will look forward to the day I can see your face again. Until then, may God, your father, your grandparents, friends, and other loved ones hold you close. I will always love you.
