“ Exactly today, five years ago, you ask my beloved husband, your beloved son Gordon to move in with us, and we could not be any happier you did. Today also marks three weeks since you left us as you transitioned to a life of glory in the Kingdom of Heaven. I miss you so much though, because this physical separation is a difficult storm to weather, but all the memories with you help make this process of adapting to a new life without you more bearable.

I am so grateful, so honored that God chose me to be the one to care for you with Gordon during these almost 5 years. You were a blessing in every sense of the way. This time with you gave me a chance to know you better, to love you more deeply, like a mother, and gave us a chance to nurture you and give you everything you needed and deserved. I praise God for that blessing upon us. I praise your son, my husband Gordon, who firmly decided to take you in with us even when many voices wanted us to put you in a Nursing Home. You raised him well, a "solid citizen" as you used to say, so when the time came he could make the right decisions without hesitation. Thank you for raising such a wonderful man God gave me the blessing of saying YES to. Should we have listened to external voices we would not have lived with ourselves should we had selfishly put you in a Nursing Home. You were where you belonged, with your son and daughter, lacking nothing. This is when the Bible became real, as Psalm 23 says: "The Lord is my Shepperd; I shall not want".

Mom, thank you for sharing with me, with us, your stories, your jokes, your laughter, your wisdom and your wittiness. Thank you so much for all the great recipes that to this day we can enjoy at the dinner table. Thank you for being a friend and a mother. Thank you for every time you selflessly offered me some of your oreo cookies or your cupcakes out of love, even when I could not eat them. Thank you for the lessons you taught us, and for the experiences that made Gordon and I grow so much spiritually and naturally. I am a better person because of you. But above all, thank you for having a sensitive heart to the word of God. I thank the good Lord for giving me a chance to pastor you and lead you to accepting Jesus as your savior and baptize you. You were sensitive to the word of God, sensitive to the Holy Spirit, and all those memories we shared will live on forever. Like I always say, the most important thing in life is the salvation of your soul, and you were saved, praise the Lord. So, until we meet once again, at the rendezvous agreed on, enjoy all the Glory, all the Peace, all the Love there is in heaven for you, in a glorified body and mind, free of illness.

Love you Mom,

Yoli
