“ Joel was a warm, caring, and creative individual. When I started working at Streamlight, it immediately became obvious that he was the "go-to" guy. He had a knack for coming up with solutions for any and all situations and he was always willing to help.

We had many good and many funny conversations over the years. He was a man of multiple interests but you always knew what was most important to him....Leslie, his family, camping, Bailey and this little guy. These are from July of 2015 when we got to meet his newly adopted sidekick, Rosco.

Go in peace my friend. You will be missed.

“ Joel was someone I deeply respected for his honesty. He had a way of cutting through noise and saying what actually needed to be said, even when it wasn't easy or popular. In a world that often rewards compliance, that kind of clarity takes real courage. He will be missed.
