“ Poppop, I'm sorry I could not get out the words today after I read the poem, I just could not get my thoughts together to tell you just how I feel. I was trying to tell you how much your guidance, support and love has meant to all of us. You have spent years watching over all of us and teaching us the tools we needed to love like you and grandma have. Five years ago today you walked down the aisle before me and watched me take the next journey of my life just like you have done with both Aunt Sue and Dad. You watched CJ and Nichole grow into such amazing adults in their journey of life after graduation. I hope you know how much we all appreciate everything you have done for each and everyone of us (even in our own little ways)!! Today was our turn to follow you and watched you walk before us back into the arms of your one and only love.. grandma (we all know how long you have waited to be with her again). Grandma and Poppop you will truly be missed but never forgotten. We will see you again. All our love!!

“ Dad, You have given so much in your life to make sure that our lives were fulfilled. I will never forget what you and Mom have done for me. I know you have waited a long time to see her again. You can now get up and walk without pain. In my eyes you are the "Greatest". I will always cherish the memories. I will never forget you. I love you. Ging-ging-shoosh

“ Dad, To put it in words that best describe your life, you finally took the ten count as everybody does or will. You fought one hell of a fight the last few years and you are and always will be the Champ in my eyes!! can only hope I can keep up the fight and work ethic you instilled in all of us until we meet again. Love, John

“ Poppop,
*I hope I left you with as many great memories as you have left me!!
Everyone and anyone that has had the opportunity to enjoy a moment with you does not realize how lucky they were.
I will keep all my memories close to the heart! I only hope I can love Brynn as much as you loved your children and grandchildren. I was never a big one for goodbyes so I will say see you later!! One day we will meet again.*
All my Love
