“ Barry Drummond had a heart of gold. When I moved in 2009, he and Karen drove from Phoenixville to Macungie to help me pack boxes. It was important to him to be busy that day and to help as much as he could. I was very touched by his generosity of spirit. In November of last year I visited with him and Karen because he wanted to see photos of a trip to Macchu Picchu that I took last year. He was so patient and so interested as I rolled through several hundred photographs. I was impressed with the quickness of his mind and his fascination with the Incan architecture. That night I was also touched by his concern for his granddaughter, Cady. He said he would gladly give up his life if she could be spared some of the challenges that she faces. He was, indeed, deeply devoted to his family and his family was lucky to have a patriarch so loving.
