“ Although time separated us, the fond memories that we shared together would remain in my heart.

For those who may know, Dave as an 12 year old boy, played the guitar without any professional training. He had an acute sense of sound and would play just by listening. I remember the street corner of Water Lane and Tunapuna Road, Trinidad where we had a ball of a time singing and him playing the guitar.

I remember quite vividly while visiting his parents place in Couva, he offered to buy fresh Oysters from the man who sold it on the sidewalk in front on his parents place. That night we counted that we had sucked about 100 Oysters each and yes the sauce was good.

Every summer Dave would either come to our residence to “spend” holidays with us or my brother Victor would go to my Uncle and Aunts place. We “pitched” marbles in the back of his parents home or we would “spin tops” on Edgar Street.

As we go older, we were separated, Dave and my brother, left for New York and I left for Canada. We lost contact with each other. It was only a few years ago, that Dave and I met and he turned out to be a gentleman in in the true sense of the word.

To his immediate son, sisters and brother, I extend my sincere condolences. Although I would not be attending his funeral, I would to share a favourite Eskimo Proverb that I shared at my fathers funeral.

“Perhaps they are not the stars, but rather openings in heaven where the love of our lost ones pours through and shines down upon us to let us know that they are happy”

“ I was Dave's IBM rep from 2008 thru 2012, but kept friendship afterwards, and had lunch and dinners occasionally, and were in touch.

Dave was very gentle and peaceful man with a big heart, who had a true passion for his work, but we also did talk about life and how he was doing shortly after sudden loss of his wife.

We exchanged health updates while he was going through some diabetic related issues, as diabetes runs in my family too. He seemed to have a good handle on the illness and was managing it well...that's why I was very shocked when i heard the sad news.

I live close to Phoenixville and where lived, so he always gave me back road tips which I still use and always think of him when I take those back roads!

Dave, rest in peace.
